

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

I. A Letter from Mr Ralph Thoresby, F. R. S. to Dr Hans Sloane, R. S. Secr. concerning some Roman Inscriptions found at York, proving that the Ninth Legion some time resided there.

obliged to the Society for so candid a reception of my poor Endeavours, which encourages me to transmit two Roman Inscriptions found at York, one very lately, the other several years ago, but no where yet taken notice of, tho it hath this very remarkable, That it is an undeniable Argument that the Ninth Legion was not only in Britain, which is rarely taken notice of, but that it resided at York; which was heretofore unknown. It is a Funeral Monument, whereupon, under the Statue (in Basse-relieve) of the Standard-bearer of the 9th Legion, is this Inscription.

* Lubens voluit

1. DVCCIVS *1. VoT. RVF1 -NVS - VIEN SIGNF. LEG.VIIII-AN. XXIIX -H. S. F.

Hic situs est.

This Monument was found in Trinity-yard in Mickle-gate at York, and was happily rescued by my Honoured Friend Dr Bryan Fairfax, from the brutish Workman, who had broke it in the middle, and were going to make use of it for two Throughs, as they call them, in the Wall: but by that worthy Gentlemans direction it was placed upright, with the Inscription outwards. That this 9th Legion was in Britain in Galba's time, and that it was also Hispaniens, appears from the very Learned Sir Henry Savile's Notes at the end of his Edition of Tacitus; but that it, as well as the VIth and the Kath, was also called Victrix, or that it resided at York, has not been observed before; and yet both are evident from this Inscription upon a Roman Brick found there.

(2195)

LEG. IX. VIC.

This is also an Argument of the Peace their Parts enjoyed at that time, (possibly the latter end of Severm's Reign,) making Bricks, casting up Highways, &c. being the usual employment of Souldiers at such vacancies. The former Inscription is now removed to the Gardens of Sir John Goodricks at Ribston; the latter is in my possession.

Sir Hen. Savile was of opinion that this Nona Hispaniensis in Britannia was one of those established by Tiberius, Cains, or Claudius, or peradventure in the la er times of Augustus; but however that it was certainly here in Nero's Reign, and that Patus Cerealis was then Lieutenant thereof is indisputably evident from Tacitus, (lib. 14. eap. 10.) who gives a lamentable account of the slaughter of seventy thousand Citizens and Contederates, by the enraged Boudicea, in which number was all the Foot of this ninth Legion: Cerealis with the Horse hardly escaping. I suppose it needless to add, that this Number is frequently by the Romans writ VIII as well as IX; for one that is but competently vers'd in their Cois or Inscriptions, cannot but have observed instances of both kinds; however, to prevent all mistakes, (it being near ten years since I saw this Monument) the Learned and Ingenious Roger Gale, Esq; was so kind as to send me a new Transcript; and I have by me also a third, lately taken by a grave Divine; all which agree that it is the IXth Legion, which is also confirm'd by the other Infeription upon the Brick, which was but lately found. shall only add what an Ingenious Gentleman of Oxford writes, because it relates to an Author I have not the opportunity to consult here, but is possibly in your Curious "I am mightily pleased with the Inscriptions "you fent me relating to the 9th Legion, there being "now no room to doubt about the place of Residence, a "thing which was unknown before; and for that reason, "those who have written about the Roman Legions have " faid nothing about this, but leave us quite in the dark; only Ursatus sin his Book de Notis Rom. I does remark. "that it must be somewhere in Britain, because Tacitus " tells us, that when the Colony at Camalodunum was de-" stroyed by Boadicia, Patilius Cerealis, Legate of the IX h "Legion, came to their assistance; but yet he makes no mention of its being stilled Viarix. This I receiv'd from Mr Tho. Hearne of Edmund Hall, from whom is expected a curious Edition of Livy.

Your Most Obliged and Obedient Servant,

Ralph Thoresby.